PATIENCE FULFILLED
• Karl Strauss’ Arts & Amps event series returns this spring and summer, with artists and bands taking over the tasting room and beer garden. Both San Diego-based artist collectives that were featured last year, Cohort Collective and Creative Souls on the West Coast, will be returning to showcase the diverse work of their artists at each event. Confirmed bands at time of press include Boostive, Elektric Voodoo, The Routine, Well Well Well, and Little Hurricane. Save the dates: Saturdays May 19, June 23, and July 28; for more live music listings, see page 18.

• Back in December, Pariah Brewing began hosting artists each month. On April 19, the “Selfie Art Show” by Wellington Jr. (@wellington_jr) debuts for one night only, between 6 and 9 p.m. Then on May 24, the abstract landscapes of Stephanie May (@salt_andpaint) will grace the tasting room; she visualizes the travel history of people she met during a cross-country road trip.

Pariah is also the beer sponsor for the Fleet Science Center’s “Crossover: Where Comics and Science Meet” series, hosted by the San Diego Comic Art Gallery in Liberty Station and IDW Publishing. General admission to these Friday events is $15, which includes two beers and a comic book (RHFleet.org). Upcoming dates:

- May 25 - GI Joe vs Six Million Dollar Man comic and the science of bionics
- September 14 - Sonic the Hedgehog comics and a look at physics principles
- November 16 - Transformers comics and the science of robotics

• The intersection of beer & films/movies/videos really kicks off in the spring:

At The Pearl Hotel in Point Loma, you can spend Wednesday evenings by the pool, starting at 8 p.m., with the following selections:
The Quintessential Festival

In June, Stone Brewing World Bistro & Gardens - Liberty Station hosts Tuesday Movie Nights, starting 15 minutes after sunset. It’s recommended you get there earlier to set up a spot on the lawn. Here’s what’s playing:

June 5 - The Big Lebowski
June 12 - The Naked Gun
June 19 - Zombieland
June 26 - The Three Amigos
July 3 - Super Troopers
July 10 - My Cousin Vinny
July 17 - Clerks

July 31 - Indiana Jones: Raiders of the Lost Ark
August 7 - Coming to America
August 14 - Jumanji (2017)
August 21 - The Dark Knight
August 28 - The Princess Bride

• The next event for photography-focused meetup group Beers & Cameras is Thursday, April 19. At 5 p.m. they will be meeting up for a photowalk, before heading to new downtown brewpub The Bell Marker at 6 p.m.

• San Diego’s irreverant web series What’s On Draft? (WhatsOnDraft.tv) returns for a third season on May 14 to explore the haze craze, brewing with marijuana, the Sore Eye Sudsmas food drive, and more. Episodes air every other Monday until the season finale on December 10.

• At Waypoint Public in North Park, the second and third Tuesdays of every month are Family Movie Nights. On second Tuesdays, the restaurant donates a portion of sales to Friends of Jefferson — the PTA for Jefferson Elementary — and on third Tuesdays, a portion of sales goes to Raise Progress. Showtime is 5:30 p.m.

• As soon as the sun goes down, Culture Brewing screens surf films (Solana Beach location) and skate films (Ocean Beach location) every Thursday. And on Thursday, April 6 from 5 - 9 p.m., the Encinitas tasting room hosts an art show with Transworld; in Ocean Beach: Lauren Horne (@hey__its_lauren); and in Solana Beach: Ali Hartwig (@alihartwig).

• Local beer drinkers may have noticed stand-alone kiosks of art prints and postcards, called The Artery, stationed in the tasting rooms of local breweries. This project, which financially benefits the local artists that are featured each month, is the brainchild of Jim Yuran, who runs Normal Heights’ Ego Id Media printing company. There are pricing suggestions for the artwork, but consumers ultimately pay what they feel the art is worth. Here’s a list of participating beer locations, plus April’s featured artists: Helm’s Ocean Beach (Janelle Despot), Kilowatt Kearny Mesa (Roger Penney), Kilowatt Ocean Beach (Harry Holiday), Mike Hess North Park (Zee Yuransky), Mike Hess Ocean Beach (Chris Dyer), Societe (Pamela Jeager), and Thorn St. Brewery (Caia Koopman).

- Local artist Rudy Pollorena Jr. aka Craft Beerd is celebrating five years in business with a special can release of Interstellar High Five on Saturday, April 21. The juicy IPA was brewed by Burgeon Beer in Carlsbad. Fittingly, limited-edition shirts designed by Rudy will be available for purchase.

- The general aesthetic for both Kilowatt Brewing locations is most definitely inspired by colorful artwork. On April 28 from 6 - 9 p.m. the Kearny Mesa brewery and tasting room welcomes locally-based, self-taught visual artist Cameron S. Brown and his abstract works using fluid acrylics.

- For the first time in years, Booze Brothers / Owl Farm is not hosting an art show this month; however, there's plenty of live music on the calendar (see page 18) and the next art show is scheduled for Friday, May 11 with Jay Riggio, who's recently been working on resin woodcut sculptures. Tunes will be provided by Featherstone.

- Both Coronado Brewing and Duck Foot Brewing have just released limited-edition cans featuring artwork from local artists. Coronado Brewing is working with Kelcey “KFISH” Fisher on four new beers this year, one of which — Coco Chaos unfiltered IPA with fresh coconut and coconut milk — was released in late February. This partnership with Fisher kicks off the Coronado Art Series, an annual collection of beers featuring custom artwork by local artists. Future release parties at the Knoxville brewery and tasting room are scheduled for late May, September, and December.

On March 17, Duck Foot’s first seasonal collaboration with Solana Beach’s Andy Davis (Way Way Out There) was released in the brewery’s Miramar tasting room. Dubbed Secret Spot, the hazy IPA with American and New Zealand hops was housed in six unique can designs by Davis, guaranteeing “visual diversity” in each four-pack. The March event benefited the San Diego chapter of non-profit Surfrider Foundation. Be on the lookout for the next beer in the Hop On Series to arrive mid-summer.

- Aztec Brewery has started a GoFundMe page with a $5,000 goal to help with improvements to their live music capabilities. The campaign reads: “For over 3 years Aztec Brewing Company has fostered a community of Musicians and Music Lovers in the North County San Diego Area. We hold free concerts twice a week, host an Open Mic on Thursdays, as well as a Monday Night Blues Jam.” More details are available at GoFundMe.com/AztecBreweryLiveMusic; see the upcoming schedule starting on page 18.

- Enamel pin designer Blank Slate (@blank_slate_design) has organized an event showcasing their work alongside 14 other pin makers, slated for Saturday, April 14 from 12 - 6 p.m. at Burning Beard Brewing. The first 75 attendees will receive a special pin giveaway. Here are the Instagram usernames for the guest pin artists: @flowerchaintz, @pin dabearpins, @langgangcollective, @elkapintan, @pinplugged, @mood_poison, @littleshopofpins, @hopp ybeerhoppinglife, @elblackbat, @nada fingsa_pin_design, @b bcre8, @viciouskill, @claygrahamart, and @pencil_fighters.

Blank Slate will also be at the San Diego Made (@sandiegomadeinsta) Spring Market Show at Liberty Station’s Building 177 on April 28, alongside Thorn Brewing, Border X Brewing, Mastiff Sausage, Imperial Grounds Coffee, and more.

- All three Mike Hess Brewing locations get involved with local artists and bands on a monthly basis. In North Park, there’s a local art show on the first Wednesday of every month (April 4); in Ocean Beach, local art is highlighted on the seventh of every month; and in Miramar, the Friday Afternoon Club hosts live music every third Friday of the month (April 20).

Not many breweries are as dedicated to aesthetics as Modern Times. I mean, I love a pretty can as much as the next beer drinking art school graduate, but Modern Times is ridiculous (as evidenced by their “Best Beer Artwork” win in our Best of San Diego Beer 2017 poll). Their over-the-top designs cause even the most apathetic art n00bs to drool with delight and their offbeat vibe doesn’t stop with packaging.

Between the now-iconic Michael Jackson and Bubbles Post-It note installation at the Lomaland Fermentorium to the tapestry-inspired giant Lite Brite wall at the Dankness Dojo in Los Angeles, Modern Times has surpassed the now standard expectation of well-designed beer branding and taken it to the next level. Behind their creative vision is Amy Krone, Director of Arts and Crafts—a ridiculously amazing brewery role that, I’m pretty sure, only exists at Modern Times. I spoke with her about the brewery’s vision, future art projects, and her shift from heading the coffee program to focusing on art full-time.

(Full disclosure: I work at Modern Times approximately 2-3 times a year as festival event support. If you heard a purple haired giant yelling for people to line up in single file at the entrance to the Carnival of Caffeination, hello from me to you!)

How many people are on the Arts & Crafts team?

Including myself, we have 6 people total; 1 Director, 3 graphic designers, 1 Art Installation Project Manager, and 1 Screen Printer/Art Assistant. We’re a small and mighty team of mind-blowingly talented people.

What does a normal day look like for you?

I pretty much have the best job on the planet. I always knew I wanted to be an artist when I grew up, but when I took a clear-eyed look at how I could do that without turning into the old starving-artist-cliche, I realized that I was going to have to be a graphic designer. Don’t get me wrong, I love graphic design, but it meant that I would have to leave behind the tactile art world that got me excited about being an artist in the first place. Then enters Modern Times.

Because we put a hard focus on art, it means that I get to flex both my graphic design and my tactile art muscles, and I get to do it in a super collaborative environment with incredibly talented folks. There really isn’t something that we wouldn’t do, from designing one-off 16 oz. cans just because we think they look dope, to building a 22 foot Macho Man Randy Savage piñata that hangs from our Portland ceiling. A lot of my time is spent dreaming up new ideas, and directing our tiny team in new, wackier art directions, but I also get to do things like get my hands dirty with enough hot glue to cover Ethiopia. It’s pretty neat.

What are the department’s goals?

Currently, our biggest goal is to expand our tiny team into a slightly bigger team. We are in the middle of building out a screen printing studio so that we can bring all of our screen printing in-house. Then who knows where we’ll go from there. Probably putting a piñata on the moon.
What’s your biggest challenge as Director of Arts & Crafts?

The only real challenge is just keeping up with the crazy growth of this company. In January, we opened up two new locations within a week of one another, one of which we literally decorated from concept to completion in a month. It blows my mind the amount of work that the six of us are able to bust out, all of which I’m insanely proud of and all of which I view as boundary pushing. It’s taxing, and we have definitely been pushed to the outer edges of our capacity at times, but when we all get a moment to look back at what we created, it’s deeply satisfying.

What has been your favorite art-related project (or projects) you’ve done at Modern Times?

Probably the 6’ x 6’ battle map that hangs in L.A. It’s intricate, and weird, and full of tiny surprises if you look closely.

How did you shift from coffee to art, and do you still work in coffee at all?

From the beginning of the brewery up until very recently, I was both the Director of Coffee and the Director of Arts & Crafts. I always knew that I would have to eventually choose between one or the other since being the director of two departments just wasn’t going to be sustainable long-term. Last July, the moment came when I had to make the incredibly hard decision between the two and we all know what happens next. Looking back though, I feel like I’m right where I should be.

If you could describe the Modern Times art aesthetic in three words, what would they be?

If you could create anything for Modern Times, what would it be?

The thing is, is that I’ve gotten to create everything I’ve ever wanted. That’s what makes this position so amazing.

Can you share any upcoming projects you have in store?

The one I’m most excited about is the alternate dimension diorama of our L.A. space that will be viewed from a submarine periscope. We are also working on brainstorming the art installations that will go into our Anaheim project. And we’re always thinking of how we can improve upon our existing facilities. Like how we decided that it’s time to refresh the Post-It Note mosaic with a new set of Post-Its. Hopefully by our fifth anniversary in July, the OG San Diego tasting room will look as spiffy as it did on our Grand Opening.

CORONADO Brewing is proud to be collaborating with local Coronado artist Kelcey "KFISH" Fisher, on a limited series of 2018 beer releases.

Coco Chaos, our first release, is a unfiltered IPA brewed with mosaic & southern cross hops, with a huge addition of coconut for a lingering tropical flavor.
Midnight Jack Adds Joint-Venture The Echo Room

Collaborations are nothing new in the local beer scene, and they’re not limited to brewery-to-brewery interactions. With the popularity of craft-beer venues at an all-time high, non-brewing interests are partnering with ale-and-lager producers. Local examples include the tasting room-equipped gaming center in Miramar established by At Ease Games in conjunction with Vista-based Barrel Harbor Brewing. Beer pairs well with many forms of entertainment from gaming to sports, movies to music. The latter is the basis of The Echo Room, a new venture in Oceanside from Midnight Jack Brewing and Craft Sounds.

The Echo Room is a live-performance venue constructed within Midnight Jack’s tasting room, mere feet from the brewhouse. It is equipped with a 16-foot-by-16-foot stage, professional lighting and full-time sound management. Those elements were introduced by Craft Sounds owner Tim Sams, a 23-year veteran of the San Francisco and San Diego indie-music scene who, feeling there were too few music venues capable of luring quality talent, conceived The Echo Room as a solution.

Midnight Jack’s owners saw it as a solution on their end as well. “With the brewery landscape expanding so rapidly, it’s important to stay ahead of the curve and offer customers a really great experience that includes not only unique, hand-crafted beer, but good food and regular live entertainment,” said brewery co-owner Katherine Scheri. “Adding a regular schedule of specifically curated, local music is something that we really want to provide our customers, and make Midnight Jack a go-to music venue in North County San Diego.”

Midnight Jack also plans to host a charity drive from Punk Rock Food featuring eight bands and food trucks on June 23. That event will benefit the Jacobs & Cushman San Diego Food Bank.

Despite my continuing efforts, there are still some people who do not consider beer as their primary motivator in life. I know, it sounds miserable to me too. Regardless, that is part of the reality that our beloved suds slingers must contend with. Finding ways to coax fresh patrons into your premises is part of the game.

Normally we celebrate the creativity of the craft brewing industry, but sadly the more adventurous promotions for it are often doomed to failure. Both Division 23 Brewing’s “Speed Dating For HVAC Specialists” and Societe Brewing Company’s underground hamster-fighting arena ultimately flopped. In fact, they performed so poorly that, apart from this article, all traces of them occurring have been completely stricken from the historical record. Sad.

There are the occasional success stories. There’s no denying that San Diego beer has wildly reinvigorated the local yoga and trivia industries. But what else is out there for inflexible people who insist on only acquiring practical knowledge?

The newest promotional frontier embraces that association with creativity by pairing the beers with the opportunity to become artists themselves. This can take many, many forms so it’s probably prudent to define what that means. What, indeed, is art? Is it an applied mastery of expressive form? Or, as Duchamp’s “Fountain” would argue, is art entirely decoupled from the labor and perceived merit of the work? Is it just paintings and stuff?

Luckily for us, the answer is (C) Paintings and stuff. Quit making everything so hard, Artists.

That simplicity of purpose is best exemplified in the weekly Iron Pig Alehouse “Adult Coloring With Beer” event. This title seems a bit risque, but rest assured there’s nothing particularly “Adult” about the coloring other than it being intended for those of drinking age. Of course, if you’re compelled to doodle something filthy, I’m not here to stifle your creativity.

I arrived at the event with designs on using some of the house-provided crayons. This was evidently something of a rookie maneuver. Many of my peers were kitted out with attache cases bursting with colored pencils sharpened to a surgical edge, probably harboring no less than eight shades of burnt umber. Adults take the celebration of childlike diversions very seriously.

After assembling enough crayons for a somewhat moth-eaten rainbow, I ordered a Fall Brewing Company Weekend Pirate #12 IPA and set down to work. At first I casually shaded sections of the page interspersed with sips of beer or conversing with my party. However, as my colors began to flesh out the image, I found myself increasingly incapable of doing all three. My vision was manifesting and I was struck with the urge to see it to completion.

I wouldn’t go so far as to say I’m adult coloring convert, but the allure is no longer lost on me. It put me in a headspace that was both compelled to finish a task while simultaneously sensing no urgency to do so. It was very relaxing in a peculiar way. If you’re ever eager to join your chums at a bar and be entirely too distracted to speak to them, I highly recommend it.

The Beer Mug Painting Class at Kilowatt Brewing Company (Ocean Beach) was a slightly different animal. It’s more of a workshop where the admission price includes all raw materials, some basic instruction, and a table full of more capable artists whose paintings will definitely shame yours. It also comes with a pint, which takes a bit of the sting out of that last bit.

Now seated with my rotund glass canvas, it was time to figure out what to paint. Normally the open bounds of that question would paralyze a non-artist like myself, but I developed a procedure to help decide. Firstly, I considered the whole of material existence along with the entirety of potential abstract thought. Next, I narrowed all of that down by only including what someone with zero dexterity and toddler-esque focus could realistically accomplish in an hour. A painting of a pint glass it was.

I spent the next 10 minutes quietly drumming up the courage to lay the first stripe of paint down. The instructor, likely sensing my dismay, inquired if I needed any assistance. By all accounts the answer was a resounding “yes”, but I wasn’t sure how she could help. It’s not as if the tools were somehow alien to me. The brush goes in the paint, then on the glass. Even if I chose the wrong end of the brush it would still technically work (and might even have me hailed as a visionary by my peers). My obstacle was just plain old confidence. This meant the only reasonable question to ask was “How can I make this not terrible?” It turns out there’s no great answer for that.
Despite my profound inability to wield a brush, I’m not entirely untrained in the world of art. In the course of obtaining my unused college degree, I also acquired a totally unnecessary year of visual arts coursework that left me with one singular lesson: If you can’t awe them with talent, dazzle them with bullshit. One dash of French surrealism later, I had elevated my wonky beer emoji into a bonafide masterpiece:

As incompetent as I knew myself to be with a brush, I was actually more vexed initially by the proposition of doing the Succulent Jewelry Workshop hosted by North Park Beer Co. and Stemtations San Diego. I didn’t have anything against drought-resistant ornamentation per se, but it was akin to an invitation to make Squid Socks — I could picture it, but had no idea it was a thing.

Making succulent jewelry is like a microcosm of floral arranging, with an emphasis on “micro”. It involves the assembly of miniscule plant cuttings on to a pendant 1.5” in diameter. When done with diligence and care, it can produce a charming accessory for any chlorophyll-deficient ensemble:

Clearly, this one isn’t mine.

While the succulent jewelry looks awfully ornate, they weren’t nearly as difficult to assemble as I assumed they would be. Beneath that lush, yet delicate presentation lies an angry, frothy sea of floral adhesive cementing each leaflet in place. With a little planning (and a lot of prodding), everything seemed to find a place. I’m sure that, were it not for my inner child urging me to do something profoundly stupid, I could have made far better use of the materials than I did:

All in all, I have to say that the marriage of beer and art was definitely to my liking. It can be something of an impediment to casual conversation given the focus directed to your budding masterpiece, but it has plenty of other benefits. There is an undeniable zen-like bliss to willfully ignoring the woes of the world to direct all of your attention to a coloring book. Building my infernal succulent was not only a good bit of fun, it reminded me of our dominion over Mother Nature, which always makes me feel important. Most importantly, the painting reminded me that I’m an undeniably shitty painter, which should put any delusions suggesting otherwise to bed when my mid-life crisis rolls around.

• Amplified Ale Works, given its name, tries to stay connected to local and regional musicians. In March, the brew team worked on a beer with Ley Seca Brewing and the band DFMK, both based in Tijuana. Two more collaborations are in the works for April, one featuring The Bombpops, and the other with The Routine, alongside Thunderhawk Alements.

• Bloom Bash returns to the San Diego Museum of Art in Balboa Park on Friday, April 27 from 7 p.m. to midnight as part of Art Alive weekend. Tickets aren’t cheap — $200 for museum members $250 for nonmembers — but the event is the museum’s signature fundraiser every year. Beer and coffee will be provided by Modern Times, while Cutwater Spirits will pour “an adventurous selection of floral-fused custom cocktails.”

Live music, performances, and dancing go all night, alongside floral exhibition interpretations and installations from HYBYCOZO and Taylor Dean Harrison. Food stations will include Avant at Rancho Bernardo Inn; Baklavalicious; Bobboi Natural Gelato; Café Coyote; Coast Catering; Crafted Baked Goods; The Dana Hotel; Eclipse Chocolate; Golden Door; Hash House a Go Go; Holy Matcha; Home Kitchen Culture; Kitchens for Good; Lou & Mickeys; MIHO Catering Co.; Mille Fleurs; Nick & G’s; Panama 66; Parq Restaurant & Nightclub; The Prado at Balboa Park; Provisional Kitchen; Puesto; Rustic Root; Sear sucker; Sprinkles Cupcakes; Sweet Petite Confections; Terra Catering and Events; TIDAL at Paradise Point; Truluck’s Seafood, Steak, and Crabhouse; Water Grill; and The Westgate Hotel.

• There has been plenty of moving and shaking in the brewing industry over the past month. Council Brewing acquired Santee’s Finest Made Ales as a turnkey brewery, Beach Grease did the same with the SpecHops facility in Vista, and Latchkey Brewing is set to debut at the former Acoustic Ales space on Friday, April 13 (Acoustic is moving to a larger space in Carlsbad). More developments: Burning Beard is expanding with a wild ale production facility; Helm’s Brewing was acquired by a private investment group, closing their production facility in Kearny Mesa to the public for the time being; Intergalactic Brewing plans to consolidate into a smaller, neighboring suite, as well as add cider production; Oceanside Ale Works re-opened under new ownership mid-month; and Torrance, California-based Absolution Brewing added their second California location, opening Absolution by the Sea in the space previously occupied by La Jolla Brewing. Read more details on all of these operations at WestCoasterSD.com.

• A blind triple IPA competition at Hamilton’s Tavern resulted in a poduium occupied by Pizza Port beers. First place: Pizza Port Carlsbad Thruster; second place: Pizza Port Bressi Ranch Blinky; and third place: Pizza Port Solana Beach Riggity Wrecked. The final scores were tabulated based on rankings of eighteen beers by more than 50 drinkers, with a portion of proceeds going to the Sonoma Pride Fundraiser for victims of the October 2017 fires.

• In March, Green Flash Brewing co-founder and CEO Mike Hinkley stated he was in search of investment into his 16-year-old company with the stipulation that an influx of funding allow the craft beer interest to remain independent.

In late March, Hinkley announced that he had secured funding from a group of investors who, in addition to providing financial support, will also aid in a strategic overhaul of the company’s operations and distribution. Contraction will be the name of the game where both are concerned.

With that strategy in mind, the decision was made to cease operations at Green Flash’s East Coast brewery in Virginia Beach, Virginia, effective immediately, resulting in the termination of 36 employees at that location, plus seven sales team members.

The 58,000-square-foot facility — which opened in 2016 and is outfitted with a brewery, tasting room and beer garden — is currently for sale. That brewery manufactured 22,000 barrels of beer in 2017, helping Green Flash come in as the 43rd largest craft brewing company in the country in terms of sales.

This closure marked the third reduction in force for Green Flash in 14 months. The first came in January 2017, when 25 employees were laid off. That was followed by this January’s elimination of 33 more employees (roughly 15% of the company’s workforce at the time). Hinkley says an unprecedentedly competitive and oversaturated market combined with the significant cost and complexity of bi-coastal operations negatively impacted overall revenue, necessitating the layoffs.

Compounding this news, just before this issue went to press, Green Flash’s barrel aging facility in Poway, Cellar 3, was also shuttered. The plan is to sell the space as a turnkey operation to a local brewing company looking to add barrel aging capabilities or expand such a program. The six employees previously stationed at Cellar 3 will remain with the company, being reassigned to positions at Green Flash’s Mira Mesa headquarters.

Green Flash opened Cellar 3 in May 2015. That facility was overseen by the company’s brewmaster, San Diego brewing veteran Pat Korn, who was let go during Green Flash’s first round of 2018 layoffs in January.

At time of printing, the planned brewpub project in Lincoln, Nebraska was still on course for an April debut, and Alpine Beer Co, bought by Green Flash in 2014, remains in operation.

We will continue to follow this story via WestCoasterSD.com.

As it does every year, the Brewers Association (BA) released their lists of the top 50 overall breweries, and the top 50 craft breweries, by sales volume of the year prior.

A refresher: The BA defines an American craft brewer as small, independent and traditional. Small: Annual production of six million barrels of beer or less. Independent: Less than 25 percent of the craft brewery is owned or controlled (or equivalent economic interest) by an alcoholic beverage industry member that is not itself a craft brewer. Traditional: A brewer that has a majority of its total beverage alcohol volume in beers whose flavor derives from traditional or innovative brewing ingredients and their fermentation.

Three San Diego breweries made the cut on the craft side: Karl Strauss kept the same rank as 2016 (forty-first); Green Flash dropped six, to forty-third; and Stone jumped one, to eighth. Stone was also listed in the top 50 overall (eighteenth).

And though Ballast Point Brewing remains the largest beer-making operation in San Diego County, it does not show up by name on either list. Instead, it is lumped into parent company Constellation Brands, which ranks third on the overall list.

Here’s the list of top 50 craft breweries by 2017 sales volume:

1. D.G. Yuengling & Son, Inc - Pottsville, PA
2. Boston Beer Co - Boston, MA
3. Sierra Nevada Brewing Co - Chico, CA
4. New Belgium Brewing Co - Fort Collins, CO
5. Duvel Moortgat - Paso Robles, CA / Kansas City, MO / Cooperstown, NY
6. Gambrinus - San Antonio, TX / Berkeley, CA / Portland, OR
7. Bell’s Brewery, Inc - Comstock, MI
8. Stone Brewing Co - Escondido, CA
9. CANarchy - Longmont, CO / Tampa, FL / Salt Lake City, UT / Comstock Park, MI
10. Deschutes Brewery - Bend, OR
11. Brooklyn Brewery - Brooklyn, NY
12. Dogfish Head Craft Brewery - Milton, DE
13. Minhas Craft Brewery - Monroe, WI
14. Artisanal Brewing Ventures - Downingtown, PA / Lakewood, NY
15. SweetWater Brewing Co - Atlanta, GA
16. New Glarus Brewing Co - New Glarus, WI
17. Matt Brewing Co - Utica, NY

BEERS
DAVE

By Gonzalo J. Quintero, Ed.D.
West Coaster San Diego had a chance to visit Fall Brewing on the first day of spring at their North Park flagship brewery and tasting room. Dave Lively (Co-Owner / Graphic Designer / Dishwasher) was there, beer in hand. “I don’t like to talk about myself, so can we talk about art.”

“First we come up with a very ridiculous, or a very fitting, name for the beer.” Lively turned to the board. “ Plenty For All, for example, is named after a local band’s (Hot Snakes) song about California and how there’s room for us all here,” he said. “The image is a funny image of California. Disney-esque if you will, running away with beers. There’s literally plenty of room for us all brewing them, as long as they’re good.”

Normally tight-lipped, Lively halted Megan Bulsara (Fall’s Director of Operations) to add her thoughts as she passed by. “Half the time Dave has a really clear idea for the name and imagery. He keeps notes constantly on his phone. He never knows when inspiration is going to hit, but it’s usually without a pen and paper handy. The other half of the time ideas are coming from all of us.”

Lively continued: “Goo Goo Muck IPA, for example, is inspired by music, punk rock, the scene we grew up in. It’s something I knew I wanted to have our latest unfiltered beer be named. I love The Cramps.” He then stopped to recite some lyrics from the 1981 song. “The beer is mucky, and the logo is a mash-up of our logo and The Cramps’ logo, and people really love it. The beer, the name, the logo, everything goes together.”

As we continued to chat, “Ghost Town” by The Specials came on the stereo. Call it serendipity; this drove home how Fall’s ethos is intrinsically inspired by music and culture. “Our beer, Days Before The Ghost Town, continues to be one of the brewery’s most popular, and it was the first unfiltered beer we released. The song is about the scene and was written in response to The Specials’ feeling that it was going to shit, because of over saturation, something the San Diego beer scene is also concerned with.”

What scene did you grow up in?

“I grew up going to punk shows at the Jackie Robinson YMCA near Market Street. I saw SNFU, The Descendents, Bad Brains — really critical bands in this small, multicultural, and terrifyingly fun scene in San Diego. It’s influenced my entire life since. The whole scene was do-it-yourself. Make your own music. Throw your own shows. Create your own fliers. Very DIY.”

How has DIY translated to good beer?

“We have a collective way of producing beer we like. Everyone that works here has an opinion. Everyone here can add their two cents. And there’s something to be said about listening to your audience, which we do from time to time. We probably wouldn’t have brewed some beers without customer input.”

How has DIY translated to good art?

“The beer is the art. Adding some names and imagery is part of that fun. As my good friend Lee Chase (Co-Owner / Brewer at Automatic Brewing Company) says, ‘We’re making beer, not saving babies, it should be fun,’ or something like that.”

The next HIT SINGLE

We're kickin' it old school with Remix IPA, using a mash-up of our favorite classic hops and fresh techniques. Cascade, Columbus, and Summit offer a bold aroma with bright riffs of dank pine and citrus balanced by soft malts. This solid gold hit is a crisp crowd-pleaser.
